COMMENTS:

State children’s cabinets and councils: Several states have established a youth advisory body within their state government. Children’s cabinets, councils, and commissions typically are made up of heads of government agencies with child and youth-serving programs, who meet on a regular basis with the collective goal of coordinating services, developing a common set of outcomes, and collaboratively deciding upon and implementing plans to foster the well-being of young people. The youth advisory bodies can successfully take on many roles related to improving youth outcomes, such as developing a common vision, creating shared accountability and increasing stakeholder engagement.

Youth Civic Engagement: Data from the Center for Information & Research on Civic Learning and Engagement (CIRCLE) at Tufts University found about a 10% increase in voter participation for youth ages 18 to 29 in the 2020 United States presidential and general election compared to the 2016 presidential and general election. Casting a ballot, however, only represents one form of civic engagement. Civic engagement includes political activism, environmentalism, and community and national service. The CIRCLE data also found an increase in other forms of civic engagement including volunteering for political campaigns and trying to convince other young people to vote. Research has consistently shown that participating in communities and being a part of groups working together on an issue has numerous benefits for young people themselves. Participation in civic engagement activities can help youth become better informed about current events.

Need for this bill: According to the author, “Youth deserve to have their voices heard. [This bill] will establish a 25-member youth commission that will serve as a statewide advisory body to the state government. At least half of the commissioners must have experienced youth homelessness, foster care, juvenile incarceration, or have special needs to ensure representation from traditionally underserved groups. The Commission’s duties will include examining and discussing policy, holding meetings and roundtable discussions with youth advocates and the public, and investing in youth by providing grants, with strict oversight mechanisms, to programs that seek to address youth concerns. Our democracy is better served when everyone, especially youth, is given an opportunity to contribute their own unique and invaluable perspectives in policy decisions that have far-reaching ramifications for the future of our great state.”

Recommended Committee Amendments: In order to fix a cross-reference error and clarify the requirements for reappointment to the commission, the committee staff recommends the following amendment:

Double referral: This bill passed out of the Assembly Accountability and Administrative Review Committee on April 14, 2021, with a 6-0 vote.

PRIOR AND RELATED LEGISLATION:

AB 1858 (L. Rivas) of 2020, similar to this bill, would have established the “California Youth Empowerment Commission” to address the growing need to engage youth directly with policymakers. The California Youth Empowerment Commission would consist of 24 voting commissioners between 14 and 25 years of age along with several ex officio, nonvoting members. AB 1858 was not heard in the Assembly Accountability and Administrative Review Committee.

AB 2252 (DeSaulnier, Bass) of 2008, would have established in state government the “California Commission on Youth” to examine and discuss policy and fiscal issues affecting the interests, needs, and conditions of the youth of California, and to formally advise and make recommendations to the Legislature and the Governor on specific issues affecting youth. The commission would be comprised of 20 youth members and 5 nonvoting adult members, to be appointed as specified. AB 2252 was vetoed by Governor Schwarzenegger.
